The Hart House landscape is reorganized to privilege pedestrian use while optimizing vehicular access for new and existing programs. An accessible path winds down the Queens Park Crescent West embankment, connecting the street directly to ground-level entrances and walking routes to Front Campus. The plaza in front of Hart House is expanded to support more café seating and special events, and completes a dedicated turn-around loop for shuttle buses and drop-off, removing vehicles from the southern end of the site. Repurposed as a visitor's center, the observatory building is fitted with an accessible entry terrace and integrated seat walls oriented to Soldier’s Tower and University College.